Job Growth Trend in nursing :

Healthcare services of all types continue to experience growth, partially because of an increase in the aging population that has more health issues to treat. Because of this greater demand for care, the nursing field has a projected growth of 15 percent between 2016 and 2026. That's a much faster growth rate than general job growth. Between the increased need for nurses and the retirement of current nurses, there will be many positions available. However, more people are going to nursing school, so there is some competition for the best positions.
